This four story, two bay wide, Second Empire Style house has had its first story considerably actered. This story is now a stone front; it has wooden siding with a lrge eave sloping above the large bay window. The doorway, on the right of the facade, has a four-light transom above it. The second story is also relatively recent. Two bays of four-over-four casement windows with four-light transoms are brought together between flat, fluted pilasters which support a flat moulded lintel, atop which is a pediment with a wreath-and-wheat decorated tympanum. The third story windows are double-hung one-over-one, with stone sills and straight bond brick round arch lintels. Above this is a pronounced bracketed cornice. Projecting from the Mansard roof are two dormers with clssical pediments, each double-hung with one-over-one lights.

On the East side of the building is a two story projecting bay containing four windows. This begins on the second story. There are three windows on the third story, all of which are double-hung with stone sillss.
